PERSONAL ACCOUNT DEALING

An authorised person must provide every employee with a written notice (the personal dealing notice) which must contain statements as prescribed by this Annex. Employees must undertake that they will observe the requirements of the personal dealing notice by signing a copy of it and returning it to the authorised person.

This Annex sets out a model personal dealing notice. An authorised person is free to impose more stringent requirements than those required by this Annex.

Model personal dealing notice

	So as to comply with the requirements for personal dealing transactions, it is required to comply with the provisions of this notice.
1.	Permission to deal It is permitted to buy and sell securities in these categories: [An authorised person should insert here types of securities or transactions in which the employee can deal. An authorised person will also need to clarify its procedure for restricting or withdrawing its consent in relation to particular securities in special conflict of interest circumstances.] An employee may not buy or sell any other securities without having obtained consent from [the compliance officer or his deputy]. Note that where a general or specific consent is given for a transaction, the other requirements set out in this notice (e.g. reporting) still need to be complied with.
2.	Rights issues, takeovers The restrictions in this notice extend to making any formal or informal offer to buy or sell, taking up rights on a rights issue and exercising conversion or subscription rights and exercising an option. The restrictions also extend to buying or selling securities under any offer, including a takeover or tender offer, which is made to the public or all (or substantially all) the holders of the security concerned.

3.	Executors and agents The restrictions extend to dealings by the employee: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a. as an executor of a will in which the employee or a relative of the employee has a significant interest;</li> <li>b. as an executor of any other will, unless the employee is relying entirely on the advice of another person (such as another broker or lawyer); or</li> <li>c. for another person, unless the employee is dealing as an employee of the authorised person.</li> </ul>
4.	General Exemptions The restrictions do not extend to any transaction in a managed or discretionary account if the transaction is entered into without consultation with the employee.
5.	Selling to or buying from a client The employee may not sell to or buy from any client of the authorised person for his own account.
6.	Reporting of transactions The employee must immediately report to the authorised person in writing any purchase or sale of a security which the employee enters into otherwise than through [name of the authorised person] or [name of another group company that is an authorised person], including those transactions falling within 1 above. If, however, the employee has made arrangements for the authorised person promptly to receive a copy of the contract note (or similar report) in respect of the transaction, the employee does not have to report it to the authorised person.
7.	Dealing ahead of a research recommendation This restriction applies when the employee knows that the authorised person intends to publish a research recommendation and the employee knows, or should know, that the

	recommendation is likely to cause a price change in the security to which it relates. In that situation, the employee must not deal until the recommendation has been published and the clients for whom it was principally intended have had a reasonable opportunity to react to it. Dealing before the research recommendation has become public may also breach insider trading rules.
8.	Dealing contrary to a client's interest The employee must not deal in a security where he knows that such dealing is likely to have a direct adverse effect on the particular interests of one of the authorised person's clients.
9.	Personal benefits If the employee's functions involve giving securities advice, including the preparation of research material, or entering into transactions in securities for the authorised person's own account or the account of those for whom it deals, the employee must not accept any benefit or inducement which is likely to conflict with the employee's duties to the authorised person or any of the authorised person's clients. “Benefit or inducement” means credit or any other financial advantages, money, property or gift; any services, facilities, or any opportunity to make, receive or increase a gain or revenue or to avoid or reduce a loss or expense. If in any doubt the employee should consult with [the compliance officer or his deputy].
10.	Counselling and procuring If the employee is precluded by the above provisions from entering into any transaction, the employee cannot advise or cause another person to enter into such a transaction or communicate any information or opinion to any other person if the employee knows, or has reason to believe, that that other person will as a result enter into such a transaction or cause or advise someone else to do so. This does not apply to actions which the employee takes in the course of his employment with the authorised person.

11.	Summary of insider trading rules The employee may not act contrary to the provisions of the Capital Market Law, its Implementing Regulations, especially insider trading rules. A broad guide to the insider trading rules now follows: Inside information is information that is not generally available, but would be price sensitive if it were generally available. An insider is a person who obtains inside information from a family, business or contractual relationship. The employee is likely to be an insider as a result of the employment, as is anyone to whom the employee passes the inside information. An insider may not trade in any security related to the inside information or communicate it to another person for him to trade in the security. Another person may not trade in a security after receiving inside information relating to it. If the employee breaches these rules, the employee may face compensation claims, fines or prison.
